DAYTON, KY.

There will be a special meeting of Bond Lodge, I. O. O. F., this evening to make arrangements for the funeral of Wm. Zuducht.

Wm. Zuducht, who used to keep a bakery in Dayton, died this morning at his residence in Newport at 2 o'clock, from intermittent fever. The deceased was a member of Bond Lodge, No. 219, I. O. O. F.

It has been noticed that some one, instigated of course by the badly demoralized stockholders of the Dayton Street Railroad line, has resorted to the papers to defend that concern against the criticisms of this paper. But they have a tough case, and they know it. What is there to defend? Has a word been written against it which is not absolutely true in every particular? Is it possible to paint the thing in its true colors? The general expression of the Dayton people is, "It isn't strong enough. Give 'em it; they deserve it." So there isn't a man, woman or child in this town, who have no pecuniary interest in the rail road, but what indorses every word uttered against it. The feeble wall that criticism tends to keep people away from the place, is put forth to draw away these attacks, and bolster up maddish sympathy with those criticisms, but it won't do. But the great horror of this place is the means of reaching it, and don't you forget it. Remove this objection and the rest will follow.

New Books.

"Whitefriars; or The Days and Times of Charles the Second," by the author of "Whitehall; or, The Days and Times of Oliver Cromwell," is one of the best historical novels ever printed, and is published this day by T. B. Peterson & Brothers, Philadelphia.

It is an historical novel of the days and times of Charles the Second, and has achieved a great popularity in England, and has been pronounced to be one of the best historical romances that has appeared since "Ivanhoe," or "Waverley." The plot and incidents are of the most absorbing and interesting kind. The reader finds on every page the stamp of the author's power, and he can not rise from the perusal of the book without admiring it to be one of the greatest and most powerful of modern romances. "Whitefriars" is published in a large octavo volume, paper cover, with edges cut open all round, price 75 cents, or bound in morocco cloth, gilt and black, price $1, and is for sale by Geo. E. Stevens & Co., Cincinnati, and all booksellers, or sent by mail by the publishers, T. B. Peterson & Brothers, Philadelphia, Pa., who are also publishing a series of octavo novels, bound in cloth, similar to "Whitefriars," by some of the best authors in the world, at the low price of $1 a copy, (formerly published at $1.50 and $1.75 each), they are bound very handsomely in morocco cloth, with new designs in black and gold, on sides and back, making very large volumes, all of which are saving a very large sum, on account of their excellent and remarkably low price.

"The Fatal Secret," by Mrs. Emma D. E. Southworth, printed from Mrs. Southworth's manuscript, written expressly for publication in book form, and never before issued in any form whatever, has just been published by T. B. Peterson & Brothers, Philadelphia, Pa. It would be small praise to assert that "The Fatal Secret" is one of the very best stories that has ever fallen from the pen of the gifted Mrs. Southworth. Not lacking one whit in the thrilling interest which characterizes all of her romances, "The Fatal Secret" will no doubt prove to be one of the most popular volumes ever issued by this publisher, "The Fatal Secret" is published in a large duodecimo volume, uniform with Mrs. Southworth's other works, and is sold by Geo. E. Stevens & Co., Cincinnati, and all booksellers at $1.75 in cloth, or $1.50 in paper cover; copies by mail, by the publishers, T. B. Peterson & Brothers, Philadelphia, Pa., on remitting price.

ALBANY, N.Y.

The Chinese employes on the Union Pacific are becoming unruly on account of the excessively cold weather. At 10:30, on Tuesday morning of last week, the thermometer indicated a temperature of only sixteen degrees below zero, and the blood of the heathen section-hands was fairly chilled if not congealed. The pigtailed fellows shivered through the long hours of the night, and in the morning, after warming their feet, concluded it was too cold to work.

A well regulated and properly constructed Chinaman can not work hard enough to keep comfortably warm when the thermometer is up to 80 degrees in the shade, hence the hope of keeping warm on Tuesday was out of the question. They rebelled, positively refusing to work, whereupon the section boss went in among them and tried to increase the temperature of their imported blood.

There were a few of them around pretty lively, when the almond-eyed chaps united in an alliance of offensive and defensive. They besieged the boss, handled him roughly, and as the Salt Lake Herald says, inflicted some painful wounds. The disturbance was finally quieted, and at last accounts the Sheriff of Summit had a band of Chinese in custody. Nothing but the finest of good potatoes, and barley can be fully relied upon in a long contest with cold weather and snow.—(Cheyenne Leader.)

INFORMATION AS TO QUAILS.

The Indiana Legislature has a bill pending to prohibit the shooting of quails for five years. We hope it will be amended, for though the quail is a friend to the farmers, there may be too much of a good thing.

Each pair of quails produces an average of ten chicks per year—many, in favorable seasons, hatch out sixteen in a brood, and then hatch a second brood. If we estimate only the small number of five hundred thousand quails in Indiana to start with (though there are probably ten times that number), and take ten per year as the produce of each pair, the figures will simply be stupendous and we present them to the Indiana Legislature for consideration.

First year, total..... 5,000,000
Second year, total..... 10,000,000
Third year, total..... 15,000,000
Fourth year, total..... 20,000,000
Fifth year, total..... 25,000,000

We would have to station an army along the Ohio River to prevent an invasion of Kentucky after these birds had eaten every last kernel in Indiana. There wouldn't be a bug left in this State, and the birds would require grain to live upon.

Estimating a gill of grain per day for each bird, it would require about fifteen million bushels per day to feed them. We enter our protest in advance, and shall demand, if Indiana does pass that law, that the State shall raise the grain to feed the birds, and shall put up a bird net for every bushel of grain raised in the State, to keep their inhabitants from invading Kentucky.

We can stand a law protecting them for two years; but beyond that we must demand a halt.—(Louisville Commercial.)

THE GROUND-HOG XXCUSE.

"Adam Crane, why did you get drunk yesterday?" blandly inquired the Court of the first man.

"His Honor's kindness book gave Adam new courage," he explained.

"It was ground-hog day, your Honor."

"So it was; but what has ground-hog to do with whiskey?"

"Our family has always celebrated the day, Judge. If it is a cloudy day we have baked geese for dinner and congratulate each other on an early spring. If it is a sunny day we always get drunk and smash windows. That's why I got drunk. I have been a regular custom for years and years, and I don't know how to stop on me with a big sentence."

"I can't help about it being a custom, Adam Crane," softly replied the Court, "nor can the people of the State of Michigan make it cloudy or sunny for the ground-hog. Our folks here found you driven into a pile of rubbish up to your shoulders, pulled you out and brought you here, and it is now my painful duty to ask you the cold prig for thirty days."

"Blast the ground-hog!" muttered the prisoner.

"No swearing, unless you raise your right hand," replied the Court. "The fact is, Mr. Crane, there is too much fooling with the weather, and there are too many signs and too many prophecies. One day the goose-bone predicts a regular old silver-plated Easter, and next day General Meyers brings in a hawk. This having to use a wine-barrow in the morning and a hand-axe at night has disgusted me."

"I don't control the weather," growled Adam.

"Can't help that; you will have to take your little ground-hog under your arm and go up."—(Detroit Free Press.)
